Some propose to pay cold the duties on sugar a bounty for the home production of sugar from cane, or beet, or sorgham. Institute of protection has been extended to product of the farm, yield of the mines, as well as strings of taxes is made the means of national grown and development, nearly trebling in strings of taxes is made the means of national grown and development, nearly trebling in strings of taxes is made the means of national grown and development, nearly trebling in strength of the same time, by competition, by reducing prices. The confederate idea had its example in slavery, and now has its natural fruits in the millions of labores deprive 1 of their constitutional rights by controlling physical force and violence. No metherwide of labore can exist in a republican community. The same contracts were made as to the relations of two parties to the subjects of odication and internal improvements. And so, fellow citizens, you may run the gamut of all political questions, great and small, that divide the moparies, and you will find the iline of demarkations union such confederate, republican and democratic. I am not opposed to the confederate miders were true to the union until drawn by state mides to fight for the confederate [1] have no distive for the democrate, many of whom I cherish as my denset friends; but I do dislike the tendency of that party to confederate ideas. They taunt us with waving the bloody shirt; we believe they wave the confederate fings. Jefferson Davis says they ugant for. Resolutions of the democrates of Kenmidy are, in effect, extracts from the confederate constitution and confederate army.

Letno man be misled into the conclusion that all the vital issues dividing the two parties have been settled. There are many things that lie near to the heart of the American poople. supported that will tend to protect and foster home industries.

The education of the rising generation, without respect to race, color or previous condition, ought to be the constant objection of desire, not only by leal and state governments, but by the national government. The equal enjoyment of every civil and political right given by the constitution should be scered by every legal and constitution should be scered by every legal and constitutional means. The shadows and prejudices of the past should be three by the lights of modern civilization, and the American people should feel that they are not citizens of mere states or local [communities, but of a great and powerful nation.

If have correctly stated the alms and tendenties of the two parties, the republican party is the only one fit to carry out such a policy. Our adversaries may brood over the dead past and mourn the decay of confederate ideas, but the republicans hall with unbounded satisfaction every advance of our country in strength and power at home and aboad. Conscious that this is consistent with the hill power of state, country and local sovereigaty, reaching to every family and homestead in the land, we brood over no lost cause, but look formal dopefully to reap for future generations the great benefits conferred by the sacrifices and services of our patriot soldiers in the preservation of the union and the abolition, of slavery.

Washington, June 1.—Clark Howell, post-office inspector at Atlanta, has resigned. Gold holdings in the United States treasury have increased six millions since May 1. There have increased six millions since May I. There has been very little change in silver circulation during the past month. The demand for notes of small denominations continues heavy and far exceeds the supply.

The appropriation for printing small silver certificates is well-nigh exhausted, and nothing can be done to meet the large orders constantly coming in, until the appropriation for the next fiscal year becomes available.

Comptroller Butler, of the treasury department, in auditing the accounts of the superintendent of the naval academy, has disallowed all items of expenditure for whisky, brandy, and other intexicating liquors, farnished to members of the annual board of visitors. Officials of both naval scademy and military scademy have been notified that no such items will, in the future, be allowed. NEW YOFK'S IMMENSE CHURCH

A Protestant Episcopal Cathedral to be Breeted at a Cost of Six Million Dollars-The Development of the Movement-The Plans for the Work-A Grand Entiding.

New York, June 1 .- [Special.] - New York was astonished today to learn that a project was on foot to build in the empire city a mammoth Protestant Episcopal cathedral, a second Westminster abbey, or St. Paul's cathedral, in fact; and even more astonished to learn that the scheme has been on foot for lover fourteen years. The committee, however, in charge of the matter is much chagrined that the matter should have been made public so scon, although it had been intended to make some public announcement in the course of a few days.

In April, 1873, an organization was formed and a charter procured to build this cathedral, but until very recently nothing of a practical character has been done. The charter required that nine of the seventeen trustees should constitute a quorum. Eight of the trustees have died, and when the late Blahop Potter was very ill, in fact on his deathbed, it was found that with him there was barely a quorum remaining. A meeting was held in his sick room, by-laws were passed, and the charter was saved. Nothing, however, of a substantial kind was done, and it is probable that this was the only meeting ever held by the trustees.

Mrs Catherine Lorillard Wolffe, who recently died, took much interest in this project, and proposed to give largely toward buying land and erecting the cathedral. Her first plan was to bequeath the sum of $1,000,000 for the purpose. Afterwards, however, she concluded to give that sum during her life time, and to accompany the well-distinguished. cluded to give that sum during her life time, and to supplement it by additional sums from her income. The will was, therefore, altered, and the matter was held in abeyance while the project was taking shape. Miss Wolffe relied greatly upon the advice and judgment of Rev. Dr. Nevin, of St. Paul's church, Rome, Italy, and only last winter he was summoned here from Ind:s, where he was journeying for his health, in order to give directions to Miss Wolffe's plans. When he reached New York Miss Wolffe's plans in her last illness, already uncenscious, and shortly after passed away. Thus by an accident of fate, neither one nor the other of her splendid plans was brought to consummation. But despite these untoward cheumstances, such an impetus had been given to the work, and so much interest was aroused in it that it was decided to proceed with the chromstances, such an impetus had been given to the work, and so much interest was aroused in it that it was decided to proceed with the plan and carry it to execution.

Bishop Potter has taken the greatest interest in the movement, and is ex-officio president of the trustees and of all committees. The vacancies in the board of trustees were filled, and that body now includes among its permanent members, Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, Dr. Wm. R. Huntington, Rev. E. W. Donald, Hamilton A. Fish, Stephen P. Nast, George McCulloch Miller, Samuel D. Babcock, Wm. W. Astor, J. Pierrepont Morgan, Cornelius Vanderbilt and Richard Anchmute, names which, in themselves, are a guarantee that the building done under their direction will be worthy of the city they represent. The idea is to erect the grandest church building in America, and one of the great cathedrals of the world.

The trustees believe that now is the time to begin work, as available sites are being rapidly occupied, and in a few years the difficulty of securing a suitable site would be immensely increased. It is only settled that the Cathedral of Jt. John the divine, as the edifice will be known, will be situated on Manhattan island, and if possible on a lofty and conspicuous printer where its movemental character will be the property of the property of the present of the grandest church property of the prope and if possible on a lofty and conspicuous pos-tion, where its monumental character will deminate the entire island. For this purpose, deminate the entire island. For this purpess, a plet at least four times the size of that on which St Patrick's is built, will be needed.

Bishop Potter will issue a circular letter in a few days, giving the plan his official sanction, and subscriptions will be called for to carry forward the work. The proposed cathedral, it is estimated, will cost about $6,000,000, and the committee thinks that this amount can be secured with little difficulty. In the meantime corred with little difficulty. In the meantime the church will be built in sections. It will prebably be necessary to build only the choir at first, which alone will be as large as Trinity chuich.

Around the cathedral proper will be extensive buildings and chapels. The style of architec-ture has not been decided upon, but it is prob-able that the Gothic design will be chosen. Already several rich persons have added codicils to their wills, leaving amounts aggreconcents to their wills, leaving amounts aggregating $500,000 for the purpose of building the cathedral. The building, when completed, will be a great addition to the attractions of this city, and the collection of the money will only be a question of time. There will be rothing narrow or denominational in the undertaking. Mr. D. Wilby James, for instance, who has given $100,000 is a Presbytain. The who has given $100,000, is a Presbyterian. The Trinity school, which is now somewhat neg-lected, will be transferred to one of the baild ings around the cathedral, and by the sale of the present site a large amount for the general building grounds can be secured.

Mass Meeting of Unionists in Birmingham -Sir Henry James's Speech.

Stars Meeting of Unionists in Birmingham
—Sir Henry James's Speech.

London, June 1—A mass meeting of unionists was held tonight in Birmingham. The following letter was read from John Bright:

The great English liberal party was called on to abandon its past traditions and prostrate fiself before an odious, illegal and immoral conspiracy, and though they grieved over the temporary ruin of the liberal party, they were guiltless of the mischief and without the shame.

Sir Henry James said the liberal unionists never wavered in allegiance to their leader until his alliance with Parnell was inevitable. They were then obliged to associate with their former political opponents. As to the Parnellites, he distrusted them as well, besides disliking their principles. A resolution was adopted approving the action of the unionist leaders.

The inaugural conference of the liberal union was apened today at Birmingham by Joseph Chamberlain. Lord Hartington, in a letter to the conference, said that the doubt and confusion surrounding the home rule question was still unremoved. The liberals professed to be ready to accept modifications of their course with granting Ireland home rule, but they made no practical suggestion as to what would satisfy them. The action of the Gladstone liberals had caused an indefinite postponement of a settlement of the Irish question. The alliance of the Gladstone government with the Parnellites had daily weakened parliamentary authority.

Mr. Chamberlair, in an address, referred to the course adopted by Mr. Trevelyan on the Irish question, and said he regreated that Mr. Trevelyan bad doffed his armor when the fight was the hottest. The liberal unionists, he centinued, had been taunted upon their alliance with the tories. There was satisfaction, however, in knowing that their allies were English gentlemen, and not subsidized agents of a foreign conspiracy. The time seemed to be approaching when the formation of a new party would be found necessary.

A recolution was passed in favor of the largest po targest possible extension of local government to Ireland subject to the su premacy of the imperial parliament and the protection of the Protestant minority. The conference was attended by 2,000 delegates, representing all parts of Great Britain. The tone of the speeches was bitterly anti-Gladstonian. Mr. Chamberlain declared his belief that conclilation would be a mere deception.

Lod Hartington's letter described the Gladstonians as absorbed in the Parnellites, their only object being to regain at any cost the support of the Parnellites by their policy on following, unreservedly, the leadership and adopting the parliamentary methods of their lirth allies.

After the first sitting, the delegates met in sections to discuss plans for the electoral congregation. A new electoral committee will be appointed for London. A large amount of money is already promised for expenses. Rumors were current at conference that the government would introduce, probably during the astump section a breed level avenue.

Rumors were current at conference that the government would introduce, probably during the rutumn session, a broad local government bill, including Ireland, and that the government bill, including Ireland, and that the government might dissolve parliament over this measure. The same report from the conservative clubs is hastening preparations for an electoral re-organization. The ministers will return to London Monday, and a cabinet council will be held on Tuesday.

John Bright's letter read at the liberal unionists mass meeting at Birmingham tonight is a long and fierce denunciation of the Gladstorian policy, which, in Great Britain, he says, is rejected by a majority of two to one. The letter continues:

An Gladstone having turned his own coat is impatient at the liberals for refusing to do likewise. History never before presented such a humiliation. Crowds of enthusiastic non-conformists supported to deal and the conduct without shame and regree? Now they march with Gladstone, may be, to a future of equal shame.

rqual shame.

Mr. Bright strongly condemns Elitor O'Brien's mission and the refusal of Iriah mayors to celebrate the queen's jubilee. After the reading of the letter, Mr. Chamberlain addressed the meeting. He complained that the Gladstoniens were abusing the liberty of speech and popular representation in order, with the Parnellites, to obstruct parliament. This west reason to the parliaments government. This was tresson to the parliamentary government and an insult to electors. It could be cured, not by procedure rules, but by the pressure of public indignation on the offenders. If constituencies were anxions for the reforms offered in the progressive spirit by the present government, they would purge parliament of men who were doing their best to destroy it.

Earl Spencer, speaking at Rugby, this evening, said he could not approve the plan of campaign, but that it was somewhat excused by the course the government had adopted. The time way to get it, he said, was to find some remedy against the eviction of tenants suffering from urjust rents. Unless that was done the government would have serious work in Iteland the coming winter.

Doubt as to the 1 state Negro Thomas

Senoia, Ga., June 1.— special.]—There are conflicting rumors and last as to the fate of Wess Crofield, the negro who cut'Mr. "Doc" Gay, so seriously Monday more sing. Tuesday morning it was reported that they had found the negro about a mile and a half beyond Mr. Gay's, at a cabia on the farm of Mr. Jones, 10 o'clock Monday, night, and that several shots were fired at him while he was endeavoring to eslape. So far as can be ascertained these are the facts, and it is believed that the negro's deadloody will be found in the swamp near by.

EDWARDS THE GUILTY MAN. Dawson, Ga., June 1.—[Special.]—Last Fridsy night Henry Walton and Tink Daniel, two young negroes, met in front of the white Baptist church and a quarrel ensued, in which the lie was freely passed. Finally Henry drew his knife and plunged it into Tink's stomach, inflicting a mortal wound. Henry succeeded in making his escape for the time. On Saturday at one o'clock p. m. Tink died. Learning where Henry's mother resided Sheriff Marshall and Marshall Hatcher left the city at four o'clock and captured the fugitive about midnight Saturday night, four miles from Cotton Hill, near the line of Clay and Randolph counties, brought him back and lodged him in jall. They traveled about sixty miles in thirteen hours. The grand jury found a true bill against the murderer today, and he will probably be tried during the present term of the court.

The negro is in custody, and was taken to the county jail at Clarksville, this afternoon. One gave me seven ounces of solution of arsenic, snother took four quarts of blood from me. All they could tell was that it was skin sickness. Wicked for Clergymen. "I believe it to be all wrong and even wicked for clergymen or other public men to be led into giving testimonials to quack dectors or other vile stuffs called medicines, but when a really meritorious article is made up of common valuable remedies known to all, and that all physicians use and trust in daily, we should freely commend it. I therefore chearfully and heartly commend Hop Bitters for the good they have done me and my friends, firmly believing they have no equal for family use. I will not be without them."—Rev. E. R. How a Griffin Revenue Man Ran Down a Moenshiner.

GRIFFIN, Ga., June 1.—[Special.]—Monday morning Collector Reynolds, accompanied by Marshal Gray, proceeded to a place to which they had been directed as the location of an illicit still. They searched around the premises and house, but could find no trace of the reported distillery. They very naturally came to the conclusion that they had been thrown on a wrong scent. Much chargined, they started home and had gone some little distance when they espied two men coming across a hill carrying some heavy article. Hiding in a fence corner, they awaited their coming, thinking they might possibly throw some light on the supposed still. The men approached and passed within a few feet of the government officits, but without noticing them. Collector Reynolds noticed that the heavy article which the men carried between them belonged to a still, and he at once determined to follow them. The men proceeded some distance in the woods, when they stopped, let their burden to the ground, and with a few preliminaries went to work distilling.

Collector Reynolds and Marshal Gray appeared upon the scene and arrested one of the men, he making no resistance whatever. The other escaped. The investigation disclosed a still perfect in its every part, but so hidden and covered as to only be found after minute search. The still had a capacity of sixty-five gallons. Engineer.

Albany, Ga, June 1 — [Special.]—The News iells of the admirable conduct of Engineer John P. Golden, in averting greater disaster in the Brunswick and Western wreck, near Peullain. The train was on time, and running into Poullain, down a long grade, at a rapid into Poullain, down a long grade, at a rapid rate, about thirty-five miles an hour, when it resched the switch at the Kaufman mills. At the suspicion of what had happened, with the rapidity of thought, Eagineer Golden grasped the air brake and applied it, with cool and determined courage, which stopped the rear passenger coaches and prevented them from piling up on the wreck of the engine and tender, and the mail and baggage car. Engineer Golden stood to his post, through the flying splinters of the debris. until the engine had plowed its way deep into the earth, burying its pilot out of sight and leaving some of its trucks on the track. He then stepped off to find that he had only received a slight gash over his right eye. Looking around, he discovered with consternation the confusion of the wreck. The tender had, through the violence of the commotion, been turned completely over and around. The baggage and mail car, with baggage master and mail carrier had been violentity thrown from the track over on its side. But, greatly to his relief, the baggage man and mail carrier, with but slight bruises and cuts, crawled slawly out. The first and second class coaches had not flown the track.

The dusky damsel, with provoking unconcern, walked off, leaving the belligerents to settle the little affair. One negro was shot through the arm.

John Trammell, Who Was Suspected of the Murder of William Johnson, Tried and Declared Inno-cent-The Circumstances of the Murder Recalled—A Chilling Sight, Res.

HAWRINSVILLE, Ga., June 1 .- [Special.]-The trial of John Trammell, on the charge of murdering William Johnson, on the 30th of May, two years ago, has resulted in an ac-

The story of the crime is a thrilling one. The dead body of Mr. William Johnson, a very aged and helpless man, was found in a hole of water on the edge of the Fennel ford on Ten Mile creek, in the lower portion of the county.
The body was first discovered by Mr. J. C.
Nobles, a nephew of the deceased. Mr. Nobles made the fact known to other parties near by and they accompanied him to the ford, where it was decided to send for the coroner, Mr. B. B. Johnson, who resides near the neighborhood. Coroner Johnson was soon on the grounds and summoned a jury of inquest, composed ot the following persons: R. E. Reynolds, foreman; W. E. Singleton, John F. Hancock, E. F. Pearce, T. T. Summerford, G. W. Nobles, J. D. Pearce, Z. J. Brown, B. F. Williams, A. S. Carr and J. T. Wright.

The jury, after fully investigating the mat-ter and giving the body of the deceased a careful examination, rendered a verdict to the effect that he came to his death by foul play by drowning in the Fennel ford on Ten Mile creek, and that the crime was com nitted by some party unknown to them.

Mr. Johnson was about 82 years old and paralyzed in his lower limbs, in fact he could not go about at all only when helped on and off his cart. An examination of his body showed plainly the impression of finger grips on each side of his neck. The water in the ford of the creek was not over six inches in depth, and it seemed that the cart had been backed to the edge of the ford, where there was a hole of water about eighteen inches deep, and in this hole the helpless old man was found.

The people of the neighborhood became incensed at what they considered one of the most diabolical crimes ever committed, and circumstances led them to suspect that two white men - John Trammell and Frank Willisms-were the murderers of the old man Warrants were sworn out for their arrest, but it was thought best to defer the execution of the warrants for a day or two and be on the lookout for more developments. Frank Williams served on the coroner's jury, and a short time before the finding of the body of deceased, Williams and Trammell who were plowing in the old man's patches, put him on his cart and he started on his jourput him on his cart and he started on his jour-ney, it is said, to visit a relative living near by. Tracks were found leading from the patches to the ford and back, and it is said that the tracks corresponded with those made by Trammell and Williams in the patches. Williams, it seems, came to the conclusion that he was under suspicion, and on Thursday he made a statement, the substance of which is as follows:

that he was under suspicion, and on Thursday he made a statement, the substance of which is as follows:

Trammell desired to gain possession of a certain tract of land owned by Mr. Johnson, and having failed to get the land by fair means, decided to try foul means. Trammell came to town on Friday before the crime was committed on Tuesday, and had a deed drawn up conveying the land from Johnson to himself. Trammell induced Johnson, so Williams stated, to sign the deed by representing it to be an order for a new road, or to allow him (Trammell) to sell liquor. Williams put his signature to the deed as a witness, and the two having taken other steps to make it a valid paper, Trammell suggested plans to rid themselves of Johnson. Williams stated that Trammell first suggested that they stick fire to the old man's house and burn him up in it, but this he (Williams) opposed. Mr. Johnson lived alone, in a single room house, and was in pretty well-to-do circumstances for a man in his disabled condition. Williams further stated that on Tuesday, after putting the old man on his cart, Trammell followed and dumped him cut in the cicek and dragged him to the hole. his cart, Trammell followed and dumped him out in the creek and dragged him to the hole, where his body was found, and held him there until life was extinct.

The above and other statements were made by Williams to a dozen or more parties, and Trammell was arrested and brought to town, Williams coming along with the crowd, and it seems that he believed that his statement would keep him out of jail, as he considered that he would be turn-ing state's evidence. He made about the same statement before witnesses after arriving in town. Williams was kept under strict surveillance by the pose in charge of Trammell, but he was not put under arrest until some time after their arrival in town, when both the prisoners were turned over to Sheriff Hunt and by him laced in jail. In the afternoon they appeared before Justice A. C. Pipkin and, waiting reliminary examination, they were again consected to jail.

Williams, after being placed in jail with Trammell, resiled the statements that he had made in regard to the crime, and said that he was prompted to make them under the inducetatement before witness es after arriving in made in regard to the crime, and said that he was prompted to make them under the inducement that he would not be imprisoned. Both the prisoners are connected with some of the best families in this and adjoining counties, and Trammell was married to a lovely daughter of a good citizen of this county, and sho is now the mother of a babe. Williams is unmarried. The deceased was a brother of Judge Darl Labrace Williams and Market and Johnson, of Wilcox county, and Mr. Israel Johnson, of Dooly.

Peter O'Neal's residence in Scintonville was destroyed by fire last Sunday

A HEADLINE in the Savannah News reads: "The city short in water." As long as water is the only beverage in which the city is short, there will be no loud complaint.

Envious Kansas City is trying to prove that President Cleveland cannot have a good time on his visit to St. Louis. Kansas City is too great a city to indulge such a petty spirit.

WALT WHITMAN was sixty-eight years old Tuesday. He is not as poor as report has made him, and is a happy old man who loves his friends and delights to have little children about him.

SENATOR PUGH, of Alabama, made $100 very easily the other day. He laid that amount as a wager that Cleveland would be renominated and re elected. The name of his victim is Mr. Cal Sayre, of Birmingham, who is able to lose $100.

An appeal to congress is made in the last number of the Chicago Grocer for the enact-ment of a national law to prevent fraudulent adulteration of food and drugs. The draft of a bill which the Grocer thinks would meet the demands of the people is presented. It is probable that this question will come up at the next session of congress.

THE dudes on the governing committee of the Union club of New York thought Billy Florence, the actor, was not good enough to be associated with them. If the Union club, d all the other clubs in the country, could get a liberal supply of men as good and as bright as Billy Florence, they would be greatly improved in all respects.

WITHIN the past twenty years the cost of travel has been wonderfully reduced. This is especially true of travel from this country to Europe. As much of this luxury can now be had for $250 as our fathers could get for $1,000. One of the evils of the cheapened rates is the rush abroad of a multitude of cheap Americans who get themselves laughed at in five or six languages.

DENNIS KEARNEY was one of the most notorious characters in the United States six years ago. The loud mouthed Sand Lots' orator has dropped completely out of the public gaze, and had been almost forgotten when he was discovered by a correspondent the other day and brought into temporary notice. He is now the mild-mannered manager of an intelligence office for cooks and washerwomen.

Nor to be behind the rest of Europe little Belgium is getting up some terrible internal disorders. The radicals are agitating an extension of the suffrage. Nearly all classes of labor are disturbed by strikes which the farmers and the government are trying to put down. The middle classes are fighting the aristocracy, while the lower classes are fighting both. Altogether there is a nice mess in little Belgium.

THE Washington correspondent of the Chicago Times says:

Judge Simonton, who was a year ago appointed United States district judge for South Carolina, has not indicated that he was a candidate for the succession to Justice Woods of the supreme court, but he is being talked about by some southern men as the man most likely to be appointed. A representative from Georgia, who is earnestly supporting Mr. Hammond, said today that there was no candidate from the south now in the field that he knew of whom he considered a dangerous rival to Mr.

In nearly all the colleges of the United States free trade theories are taught. An attempt to meet this influence is made by the American Protective Tariff league. It offers handsome cash prizes for the best essays on the advantages of protection. Silver medals are offered for essays which are especially meritorious but which fail of sh prizes. Responses from students of colleges in twenty states have been received for the competition which is to be decided on the 15th of June.

A RECENT decision of the supreme court is loudly complained of by large western importers. The United States attorney in ew York brought suit against a firm in that city for the recovery of $300,000 on account of fraudulent undervaluation of imports. It is claimed that many New York ses have been in the habit of importing from which they were purchased and on a valuation fixed in Europe. Western mer-chants claim that this fraud has placed them at a great disadvantage. In the recent case the supreme court held that money due for undervaluation could not be recovered after the goods had gone into the hands of con The court also held that the law permits the values of imports to be fixed in foreign countries. The decision has raised a howl in Chicago and St. Louis. Prominent importers in those cities say that it will be impossible for them, after this decision, to compete with their slick and unscrupulous competitors in New York.

A SOCIETY for the reformation of the stage is suggested. One of its objects is the suppression of plays of the French school, their place to be supplied with representations of social and domestic aims of the society are good; but the main difficulty in its way lies in the fact that as long as the public will flock to see nasty French plays there will be no lack of actors and actresses who will be ready to portray their meretricious charms.

Some Significant Opinions.

The scores of Decoration Day speeche reported in our northern exchanges show that the people of the two sections are once more united in bonds of love and mutual respect. Here and there a discordant note is heard. As, for example, the following from Rev. John Rhey Thompson, D. D. who spoke at New York, The reverend gentleman said:

Again we are not here to apologize for civil war nor explain how or why the north was triumphant, Laughter and cheers] They say now the south was patriotic-patriotic as Grant. Never, neve There is one man left, at least, who will teach h boy it was not simply a mistake, but that the south was everlastingly wrong and the north everlastingly right. They say they were honest; so was Paul when he went killing on his way down to Damascus. Some things were settled by the war One is that no rule or ruin party can have a healthy existence in this country. The south wanted to compromise with God on the question of slavery but God said: "No. you must let my people go: but yet they parleyed, and then God cut the cance out with the red knife of war. God showed his power in the way he got Grant and Lincoln ready and he did not confer with the aristocratic nabobs of the eastern seaboard about either. [Laughter and a voice: 'You're from Ohio, you are.'

In sharp and pleasing contrast to this is the utterance at Boston of Corporal Tanner, who lost his leg in the service of his country. It is probable that the Rev. Thompson for got to fight while the war was raging and being a good and willing man takes a hand now. Read his words over once more and remember that they come from the man of God-who serves the meek and lowly Christ -and then contrast them with the following words from the bluff one-legged soldier, who does not speak under the hallowing inlaence of the pulpit. The corporal says:

For those who fought on the other side Corpo Tanner had only kind and eloquent words. rgiveness to them since the surrender at Appom-tox, he said had been full and complete. If the an who pulled the lanyard of the gun whose nan who pulled the lanyard of shell tore off both his feet should appear befor him he would put out his hand and say: "Put it there, Johnny; let us go out and take dinner to gether."

Of the loyalty of the south today he had no doubt, and he believed that should it ever be necessary the cohorts of the north and the south would unite together and lick all creation. We fear the good corporal puts it too strongly. We doubt if the united cohorts of the north and south could "whip all creation." They might do it if the Rev. John Rhey Thompson was barred from the forces of "creation." But see what the Chicago Inter Ocean, one of the extremest republican papers of the north, has to say: The unique cross of southern moss, an offering from a southern city to the ex-contederates living in Chicago, stood for two days in the window o The Inter Ocean office, the uncompromising republican paper of the northwest. This was a reminder not of the war, but of what followed the war The ex-confederates went quietly to Oakwoods to decorate with southern moss and flowers the graves of those who wore the gray, and as they stoo eeming isolation, the sudden roll of di ed the approach of three detachments of men who still wore the blue, each with a testimonial of their simple respect for the men who fought against them. This mingling of southern moss and northern flowers, this marching down of union veteran on ex-confederates, who now carried the same flas as themselves—these were not reminders of the war so much as what came after the war.

The tides are running right! Bearing away from American shores forever the saum of sectional hatred and prejudice. Piling in upon these shores forever the full tide of national love and reconciliation.

The "Free Whisky" Dodge.

A person described as "a well-known distiller," informed Mr. George Alfred Town. send the other day that he did not believe congress would repeal the whisky tax on account of the "present high tide of the temperance agitation." "The temperance peo ple," this prominent distiller remarked, 'suppose that if the tax on whisky is reduc ed more whisk will be drank."

The probability is that this prominent distiller knows very little about the views of the temperance people on this important subject. Generally speaking, prominent distillers are not in the best positions in the world for gathering the views of the temperance people.

Our own opinion is that the temperance people understand this question of whisky taxation better than the prominent distiller. They know that the tax as it is now levied throws the whole business into the hands of a monopoly which is thereby made a powerful factor in politics, and they know, moreover, that the law as it stands offers a large bonus to the illicit traffic in liquor-a traffic that is much more insidious and quite as dangerous as any form of the liquor business -looking at the matter from a temperance

Nor is this all. There is not an intelligent temperance man in this country today but knows that the repeal of the infamous internal revenue system does not mean free whisky. With the present laws abolished the whole business would fall where it be longs-under the control of the states. A whisky tax could be much more effectually collected by the state than by the irresponsible agents of the federal government Where the temperance sentiment is strong enough the manufacture of spirits could be taxed out of existence. At any rate, it would be placed under state control.

Newspaper Libel Suits. A veteran editor has given his experience in libel suits, and it is interesting. Mr. Matthews, of the Buffalo Express, states that during his twenty-five years of editorial labor he has been sued for libel a dozen times. In only one case was the verdict against him, and that was for $1,000 dam houses have been in the habit of importing ages. Mr. Matthews has appealed this case, so he may jet have a clean record. He says he has made it a rule never to retract or apologize after a suit has been brought against him. He believes in going slow in matters which may possibly provoke libel suits, but having once taken a stand, his plan is to fight to the end.

The confessions of Mr. Matthews elicit s statement from Editor Dana, of the New York Sun, which is even more remarkable considering the aggressive temper of that gentleman. In forty years of the liveliest sort of newspaper work-most of it in New York-Mr. Dana has been sued many times for libel, but only two cases have gone against him. In one of these an attorney, who had been engaged to defend the suit, compromised for $1,200 against the judgment of Mr. Dana. In the other case the plaintiff was awarded nominal damages which enraged him more than ever.

Mr. Dana says that a long experience and a wide scope of observation have convinced him that in libel suits against editors the plaintiff is ordinarily beaten. He also says that there are two rules which just and sen sible editors always follow. One is to frankly admit and apologize for an error as soon as it is discovered and before any threat of legal process is made. The other is never to apologize after suit has been begun, but insteed, to make as good a case as possible and calmly await the result.

How to Make It a Jubilee

Queen Victoria is a good-hearted old lady, but she has gone about the celebration of the jubilee year of her reign in the wrong

Everywhere in her kingdom there is almost unprecedented distress. In Ireland the exactions of the land lords keep the poor in a starving condition. In Wales the Meth odists have been drawn into a revolt against the English tithe proctors. The poor of London are ready for revolution or anarchy, or anything.

But her gracious majesty does not allow her mind to dwell upon these matters. With her enormous private fortune and her influence she could make the present year a jubilee occasion for her suffering subjects, instead of a succession of holidays for her own glorification.

Has some such thought occurred to her She has announced that she will bestow ten thousand beautiful mugs upon the poor children of London. This is something, but there will not be enough mugs to go around. She has sent a telegram of sympathy to the widows and orphans who lost their husbands and fathers in the great colliery explosion in Scotland, but when people have nothing to eat a message of sympathy is a very thin Doubtless no organized movement, even though headed by the queen, could abolish misery and poverty, but it would improve the condition of the masses, touch their hearts, and revive their waning loyalty. As it is, the spectacular splendors of the jubilee will embitter those who have nothing to rejoice over, and the gulf between the masses and the classes will yawn wider than before. In some respects the situation is similar to the state of things in France before the revolution. On the one hand there is the same wretchedness, squalor and savage hatred, and on the other the same selfish in difference and oppression. It is no time for the upper classes to indulge in an extravagant revel. It is a time for the exercise of charity, conciliation and justice on the part of those in power.

It Has Been Tried Before. It is amusing to sum up what the "prom inent official, entirely disinterested," knows concerning the president's probable course in filling the vacant judgeship.

He manages to stuff the telegraph service with a quantity of mush about what the president will do that amounts to little or nothing when it is carefully considered. We had onite a dose of this individual before the railroad commissioners were appointed and in almost every particular he was giving what he wanted done instead of what th president was really going to do.

It is getting to be the fashion now for some harger on at Washington, who is probably in the pay of some man, to voice the sentiment of a "prominent official entirely disinterested." It occurs to us that it is somewhat strange how a prominent official can be entirely disinterested, who is so well posted about what the president is going to do, and who goes on to give the reasons that appear to clearly defined in his own mind why the president should do something very

President Cleveland has been in the habit heretofore of making up his mind and acting promptly. This is the right course, and it is just what we can always expect. Views that are made to echo the sentiments of men who cannot reach the president in any other way will have but little weight. The pres ident has not even considered the vacant judgeship so far, and it is impossible for any prominent official to outline his course, When he makes up his mind he will hardly divulge his purpose to a prominent official who will telegraph it all over the country before he is ready to act.

The Island of Cyprus. The telegraphic report of the cession Cyprus to Great Britain by the sultan of Turkey indicates new and important developments in eastern affairs.

Since 1878 Cyprus has been peculiarly situated. While it remained a part of the Ottoman empire, England was empowered by the terms of a treaty to administer the government so long as Russia kept Batoum and Kars. The absolute cession of the island shows that the Russians are not expected to tone down their aggressive policy, and that England and Turkey are willing to stand by each other, or rather that England is ready to bolster up Turkey sgainst the czar. Cyprus is one of the most famous island of the Levant, and is commandingly situated, containing 3,584 square miles and about 200,000 inhabitants, three fourths of whom are of the Christian faith. The exports amount to something over a million dollars a year. From the very earliest times the island has been noted for its wines, fruits, minerals, cotton, silk and beautiful women, It is a rich prize, but it may prove a very expensive possession to its new owner. 'Liza Pinkston's Man. John Sherman, who was as gentle as a spring lamb in his speeches recently delivered in the south, has entered somewhat fercely on his campaign in the west. His speech, delivered yesterday before the members of the Illinois legislature, is before us.

It is altogether too long for our columns.

and it is uninteresting except as it displays the narrowness of John Sherman's mind and his disposition to revive and renew the sec-tional issues which the best men of both parties have practically agreed to bury.

As voluminous as it is, Mr. Sherman's speech is mostly taken up with a tremen-dous effort to renew the hatreds of the war and the prejudices of the reconstruction period. Those who have credited John Sherman with statesmanlike views have only to read this lively screech in which he makes no effort to conceal his hatred and intolerance of everything southern, revives every lie and every invention that the republicans have tried in vain to make history of, and he gloats over them with fresh accessions of malevolence in every paragraph,

Perhaps there is no more disagreeable spectacle in modern politics than that of the corrupter and briber of the Louisiana return ing board trying to paint a virtuous blush on the brazen cheeks of the republican party.

MR. DANA declares that the most beautiful color for hair is red. We have always said that Mr. Dana was a man of taste and discretion. It is a great pity that Mr. W. F. Storey cannot come back from the dead and revise his Chicago Times.

THE New York Herald says that "the demo cratic party is all right and will keep the lead. This is a happy announcement. But the democratic party cannot succeed until it repeals the infamous internal revenue system.

POULANGER is still a very big man in France.

THE adherents of Brother Blaine appear to be hedging. They are beginning to claim that South America is not safe unless Brother Blaine is nominated. Well, it is an easy matter to nominate Brother Blaine, but who is going to take the responsibility of electing him?

EDITOR MOSES HANDY, of Philadelphia, says that the question of states' rights was finally destroyed in 1865. Does Editor Handy mean that the people of the northern states fought to destroy their own rights under the constitution? And if he doesn't mean this, what in the name of common sense does he mean?

FACTS ABOUT BIG FAIRS The Piedmont Project Exciting Favorable Judging from the comments of the public in regard to the proposed Piedmont fair, the project is attracting a great deal of attention. In order to give the present generation who were children at the time of the centennial an idea of the past world's fairs, and especially of the centen-nial, the following interesting facts are presented: The international exhibition of arts, manufactures and products of the soil and mine was opened by President Grant on May 10, '76. The results of the exhibition, by the almost unanimous judgment of the public at home and abroad, were in the highest degree successful. It brought together a far wider concourse of American people than was ever gathered on any other occasion. The great resources of the country were exhibited in a manner approximating though not reaching completeness. The vast industries of the continent were in the highest degree impressive and instructive. The superiority of some of the foreign exhibits in decorative art and the fine classes of manufactures, especially in organization classes of manufactures, especially in ornamental articles, did much to stimulate emulation among our own artists and artisans. The educationa effects of the exhibition were beyond computation The whole exhibition per

to these figures was made at Paris in 1867, when 173,920 attended the exposition. Trees as Sanitary "Pointers." From the New York Sun.

Trees are often useful guides to the selection of residences. Numerous trees with a rich foliage and a rank undergrowth of ferns or moss indicat a damp, stagnant atmosphere; while abundance of flowers and fruit imply a dry, sunny climate. Children will be healthiest where most flowers

Children will be healthlest where most flowers grow, and old people will live longest where our common fruits ripen best, as these conditions of vegetation indicate a climate which is least favorable to bronchitis and rheumatism.

Pines and their companions, the birches, indicate a dry, rocky, sandy, or gravel soil; beeches, a dryish, chalky, or gravel soil; elm and limes, a rich and somewhat damp soil; oaks and ashes, a heavy clay soil, and poplars and willow, a low, damp, or marshy soil.

Many of these trees are found growing together, and it is only when one species predominates in number and vigor that it is truly characteristic of the soil and that portion of the atmosphere in connection with it.

ECHOES FROM THE PEOPLE

A Hard Question to Settle. FDITORS CONSTITUTION: Will you please state, to decide a bet, whether or not Scott Thornton's promunciation of Richelieu (Ritchultayere) is correct. Respectfully,

That momentous question can only be settled by reference to Actor Thornton or Colonel Smith Clayton, his former manager, SUNDAY BASEBALL.

An Oil Country Preacher's Sermon Against the Sinners of the Diamond From the Oil City Derrick.

Rev. Mr. Woolsock, popularly known as "the Deacon," in his sermon up the creek last Sunday, made a few remarks pertinent to baseball. Pointing out of the window at a game in progress on the adjoining Wilson flats, he said: "See that logier with the bird cage on his head, standing like a straddle-bug behind the bat. He is not desecrat ing the Sabbath by playing ball, because he isn't playing ball. He can't play. He imagines he can, of course, and goes through with all the painful contortions of a real ball player; but in the devil's score book he is charged ten times over for every error, and a nice cord he'll have when the season is over and the time for his eternal rest should be at hand. It will be a sorry eternal rest for him."

Just then some one made a long hit, and a shout went up from the crowd.

"Yes, hoopla!" yelled the deacon, raising his voice above the din; "hoops till the crows come home, but unless you raise your hosannas to the Lord, you'll never reach the shining home plate of everlasting life. That was a long hit to center. and I give his nibs there credit for tak-ing it in, but the devil will take him in just as slick on the last inning of all. You may send in your curved balls, and smash the leather in the rose to the right or to the left field: you may steal from bag to bag and slide in home on your proloons, but finally you will get a goose egg in kingdom come. Aye, pound on the pearly gates with your baseball bat, but if there is a shadow of a Sunday game on It, down to the eternal roast you go. St. Peter careth not whether you belong to the Snapdragoons or the Whangdoodles, if you swing your festive willow and pound the bags on Sunday saltpetre will not save you. There goes another long hit to the left, and another howl goes up from the assembled multitude of dudes and loafers. Chase the ball, aye, leg it till your ungedly heels beat a coat-tails, but my word for it, the devil will never get away from your elbow. Old Clootie is a base runner and a ball chaser himself, and he'll stay with you until his dominions freeze over and have to be abandoned for an ice pond." The deacon made a few more remarks, exhorting his hearers to shun the seductive ball field and the treut pond on Sunday, and announced services next Sabbath morning and evening at the red school house on

KILLED BY AN ORANGE SEED

Henry Chatfield Dies After an Almost Desperate Surgical Operation. From the New York Sun.

Henry Chatfield, of 115 Henry street, Brook lyr, the head of the hosiery department of a Ful-ton street notion store, died yesterday afternoon of the effect of the lodgment of an orange seed in his intestines. He had been ill for several weeks with inflammation of the intestines, followed by ulceration. Di Emerson, his physician two days ago called in Dr. William Gilfillan for consultation, and they, hav-ing decided that an operation was necessary, pro cured the assistance of Dr. F. H. Colton, Yester day morning the three doctors made an incision and after removing a quantity of pus found the source of the trouble and removed it. The patient, however, was unable to rally from the shock, and died about 4 o'clock. Dr. Gilfillan said last night

"The operation was a desperate one, and was undertaken only as a last resort. There was no possibility of saving the patient otherwise. The orange seed was found lodged in the appendix vermitormis. This is a small sac that is attached to one part of the intestines. What purpose i serves is not exactly known. It is, however, fort of trap, always ready to catch and hold hard substances passing through the intestines. The lodgment of such substances in it is not invariably fatal, but the exceptions are rare. Seeds of oranges raisins and similar fruits are peculiarly liable to be caught in this way. Is it dangerous to eat oranges? Well, I suppose in a city of this size there is one case a year of death from such a cause. Very frequently it is an orange seed, but not always There are about 600,000 people in Brooklyn, all eating oranges right along, and with one death a year from this cause it would seem to be about as langerous to eat an orange as to sit in the house and wait for a stray pistol ball to kill you. Still, it's just as safe and a good deal nicer not to swallow the seed when you eat oranges."

A Tender-Hearted Tyrant,

From the Texas Siftings. Some twenty years ago, when John A. Ellsler was manager of the Academy of Music in Cleveland, there was a man connected with the stock company in the capacity of a heavy villain, who, while he was a good actor, had an inordinate fondness for sack, to draw it mildly, which he never did. We will call him De Budge, which is safer than to give his real name, for he is living yet, we think. At least we will give ourselves the benefit of the doubt.

De Budge was a very tender-hearted man when full of his name. He would weep profusely over any tale of woe, no matter how remote it might be from his own time and environment. He used when the barkeeper put it in his lemonade, as he generally did.

One afternoon when in his cups De Budge was discovered weeping as though his heart would break. When asked the cause he said he was thinking how cruel it was to make the Eyppi-ians cross the Red Sea in pursuit of the Israelites without first supplying them with life preservers. You can gather from the above what kind of a heavy villain De Budge was when loaded to th One night when the play was William Tell, De

Budge was cast for the tyrant, Gesler, an equally heavy but more temperate villain, appearing as the hero of Switzerland. De Budge had been budging pretty heavily dur-ing the afternoon, and when he came to his dressing room to dress for his part it was observed that he was full. However, he managed to pull through very well until they came to the scene where Tell is commanded to shoot the apple from his child's

The prompter cursed at the wing and tried to set him right, but Tell, hoping that the paroxysm would pass over, went right on with his part:

'Sir, have you no children? This gave the finishing blow to De Budge. He shrieked "Yes, I have, Bill-two splen' boys! I love'm (hic) like er life's blood. Don' sh-sh-(hic)-oot,

KENTUCKY PIONEER LIFE

Interesting Incidents of Early Days in the "Dark and Bloody Ground From Harper's Magazine for June.

The dangers which Boone and his companions encountered in the fields came to the very door of their cabins, and constantly menaced their families. Indians lurked singly or in parties to selse a prisoner or take a scalp whenever an incantion white should give the opportunity. Frequent combats (and each combat ended, as a rule, in the bats (and each combat ended, as a rule, in the death of one or both of those engaged) had habituated the men to danger. It was later that they felt the danger of their wives and children. Late on a Sunday afternoon in July, 1776, three young girls ventured from the enclosure of Boonesborouge to amuse themselves with a cance apont the river that flowed by the fort. Insensibly they the river that flowed by the fort. Insensibly they the river that flowed by the fort. Insensibly they drifted with the lary current, and before they were a ware of their danger were selzed by five warriors. Their resistance was useless, though they wielded the paddles with desperation. Their canoe was drawn ashore, and they were hurried off in rapid retreat toward they have to be a solution of the first series were heard at the fort, and the cause well guessed. Two of the girls were Betsey and Frances, daughters of Colonel Richard Callaway, the other was Jemima, daughter of Boone. The fathers were absent, but soon returned to hear the evil news and arrange the pursuit. Callaway assembled a mounted soon returned to hear the evil news and arrange the pursuit. Callaway assembled a mounted party, and was away through the woods to head off the Indians, if possible, before they might reach and cross the Ohio, or before the fatigue of their rapid arch should so overcome the poor girls as to cause their captors to tomahawk them, an ber their flight.

Boone started directly on the trail through the Boone started directly on the trail through the thickets and canesbrakes. His rule was never to ride if he could possibly walk. All his jorneys and hunts, escapes and pursuits, were on foot. His little party numbered eight, and the auxisty of a father's heart quickened its leader, and found a eady response in the breasts of three young men, the lovers of the girls.

Betsey Callaway, the oldest of the girls, marked the trail, as the Indians hurried them along, by breaking twigs and bending bushes, and when threatened with the tomahawk if she persisted, tore small bits from her dress and dropped them to guide the pursuers. Where the ground was soft enough to receive an impression, they would impress a footprint. The flight was in the h method; the Indians marched some yards apart through the bushes and cane, compelling their captives to do the same. When a creek was crossed they waded in its water to a distant point, where they waded in its water to a distant point, waged the march would be resumed. By all the caution and skill of their training the Indians endeavored to obscure the trail and perplex the pursuers.

The nightfall of the first day stopped the pursuit of Boone before he had gone far; but he had at the direction the Indians were taking, and at early dawn was following them. The chase was continued with all the speed that could be made for thirty miles. Again darkness compelled a half, and again at crack of day on Tuesday the pursuit was renewed. It was not long before a light film was renewed. of Boone before he had gone far; but he had fixed was renewed. It was not long before a light film of smoke that rose in the distance showed where the Indians were cooking a breakfast of buffalo meat. The pursuers cautiously approached, fearing lest the Indians might slay their captives and escape. Colonel John Floyd, who party (himself afterward killed by Indians), thus described the attack and the rescue in a letter written the next Sunday to the lieutenant of Fincastle, Colonel William Preston

"Our study had been how to get the prisoners without giving the Indians time to murder them after they discovered us. Four of us fired, and all of us rushed on them; by which they were prevented from carrying anything away except one shot-gun without ammunition. Colonel Boone and myself had each a pretty fair shot and they began to move off. I am well convinced I shot one through the body. The one he shot dropped his gun; mine had none. The place was covered with thick cane, and being so much elated on recovering the three poor little heart-broken girls, we were prevented from making any further search. We sent the Indians of almost naked, some without their moccasins, and none of them with so much as a knife or tomahawk. After the girls came to themselves sufficiently to speak they told us there were five Indians, four Shawause and one Cherokee; they could speak good English, and said they should go to the Shawause towns. the war club we got was like those I have seen of that nation, and several words of their la which the girls retained, were known to

The return of the rescued oirls was the occasion for great rejoicing. To crown their satisfaction, the young lovers had proved their prowess, and under the eye of the greatest of all woodsmen had shown their skill and courage. They had fairly won the girls they loved. Two weeks later a general summons went throughout the little settle-ments to attend the first wedding ever solemnised on Kentucky soil. Samuel Henderson and Betsey Callaway were married in the presence of an approved company that celebrated the event with dancing and feasting. The formal lieuse from the county court was not waited for, as the court was part, was distant more than six hundred miles. The ceromony consisted of the contract with witnesses, and religious vows administered by Boone's brother, who was an occasional prea of the persuasion popularly known as Hardshell Baptists. Frances Callaway became within a year the wife of the gallant John Holder, afterward greatly distinguished in the pioneer annals, and, Boone's daughter married the son of his friend Callaway.

BUNNING THE BLOCKADE.

How a Scotch Sailor Carried Off a Cargo of Cotton Under Difficulties

The following story is told by Charbsts's Journal of how Captain Wilson, who ran the blockade seventeen times during the war, savet a valuable cargo from a federal blockading vessel:
"He was in command of a large blockade runner which had safely entered one of the southern ports. He had attempted to escape during a fog in the evening; the fog suddenly lifted and he found he had nothing but a swift pair of heels to rely upon, for a federal cruiser was within range of him. The federal fired across his bows, but the captain took federal fired across his bows, but the captain took no notice beyond putting a little extra weight on the safety valve. His decks were piled high witk cotton, which formed an excellent protection against small arm fire. The federal now opened the ball in good earnest, and shell after shell churned the water into foam around, but not one struck her. Just as she was getting out of range-however, a shell penetrated the side and lodged in the boiler, and the yessel was helpies she had considerable way on her, so, though six higher, he was headed for shore.

though sinking, she was headed for shore.

"The federal ceased firing, and watched the disabled yessel until at last she was beached, half fall of water. Captain Wilson and his crew fied to shore, and saw the federal send off a boat to in-spect their capture. Satisfied that the vessel was completely disabled, the federal steamed off to her tation in the carried spect their capture. Satisfied that the vessel scompletely disabled, the federal steamed off to be station in the assured hope that she had settled Captain Wilson this time. The misfortune, however, did not daunt him. He made his way to a neighboring plantation, obtained the assistant of a number of hands, and as soon as the captor was a number of hands, and as soon as the captor was a fight and the tide had receded, unloaded out of sight and the tide had receded, unleaded the bulk of the cotton. "The cotton was reshipped, and in the early gray of the morning, as the federal captain appeared in the offing to take possession of his prize, he beheld her steaming away to England as it nothing had happened, while a contemptuous salute from Captain Wilson's single gun gave him a forcible idea of the resources of a "canny Soo" in a corner."

Stonewall Jackson's War Horse as He Was Twenty Years Ago and is Now.

Mr. Frederick Webster, the taxidermist. has spent many months of labor on the work of mounting "Old Sorrel," as Jackson's favorite steed was called during his last years. Although the horse is reproduced as true to life as it is possible to make him, yet only the hide and the hoofs are

Just one year ago Mr. Webster was summoned to Richmond, Va., to perform the last sad rites, which in his srt are the first, on the horse. Old Sorrel in his set are the first, on the horse. Old Sorrel breathed his last surrouned by the veterans of the home, who had found a peculiar pleasure in kindly caring for him in his last days. It was not unnatural that those who had so tenderly nursed him for the memories; that clustered about him should have turned aside to brush away the tears when the little horse died.

His epitaph is simple, but between the lines speak volumes:

OLD SORREL, Of obscure birth, He achieved fame. The faithful servant Of a noble master. He died March 17,1885. Aged 36 years.

The tough little horse would endure any amount of hard riding without signs of fagging; if, however, his rider dismounted, he would retresh himself by promptly lying down, without waiting to have the trappings removed. Although the saddle suffered from the contact with the earth, bis owner would not allow him to be disturbed. The horse was very fond of apples, and the general always remembered him, when that delicacy could be had. Little Sorrel soon became a thoroughly trained steed. If his rider was deep in the mysteries of some plans, he would suit his gait to mysteries of some plans, he would suit his gait to the humor; he often heard the soft accents of a the humor; he often heard the soft accents of a mutiered prayer, and bore himself with a show of solemnity until some dashing courier on a spirited horse, or the "song of a shell" aroused him to bear himself like the war horse that he was. The horse loved the roar of battle and the rush of a charge, and chafed under a close rein and a dogged retreat.

Jackson did not know music, and once showed his dullness for it by acking a roung ledy if she

Jackson did not know music, and once showed his duliness for it by asking a young lady if she had ever heard a song called "Dixie," and when she had finished singing it he seemed much pleased, but did not recognize the air played every day by the bands in the army. But there was one kind of music which he always recognized—it was the yell with which his troops always greeted him when he appeared before them. He always achieved the compliment by taking off his each knowledged the compliment by taking off his gray cap, and Little Sorrel, catching the inspiration of the moment, would break into a gallop and con-tinue it until the sound had ceased. The inmates of the soldiers' home say that up to the last he re tained his fondness for the sound of a gun; that when the boys would fire rapidly in the neighbor-head, killing robbins, the horse would trot off in the direction and look over the fence with great Interest; turning with the change of direction he would trot off in the direction of the sound. It is rather remarkable that the horse was never wounded, although he bore Jackson through his campaigns of Romney, McDowell, Port Republic, Winchester, Cross Keys, Cold Harbor, Second Ma-nassass, Fredericksburg, and the fatal field of Chancellorsville. During the Maryland campaign he rode a handsome gray, presented to him by an admiring Marylander, and came near losing his life by the horse falling on him. He had also a very handsome sorrel presented to him by the people of Augusta, Ga.

It was at Chancellorsville, after a vigorous stroke, when Jackson by a prompt movement had cut Hooker's line in two, capturing many prisoners and guns, that Little Sorrel was to lose his most devoted friend. It appears that Jackson rode out with three or four members of his staff to reconnoitre; when they returned it was dark. The troops that saw him pass down the road had been relieved by others, who were instructed to fire upon the spproach of anything indicating the enemy; these were startled by the spproach of horses' hoofs in a rapid canter and delivered one or two villeys. The result of this assault was the unborsh g of Jackson with a wound in the right hand, snother in the upper part of the right arm, and a third in the left arm. These wounds were not necessarily fatal, but soon after he took to his bed pneumonia developed, with a fatal result. Little Sorrel was stampeded when the confusion that followed the terrible accident was at its height; it was feared that the little horse had escaped into the enemy's lines. The next day some of Stuart's men found him and returned him to

After the death of Jackson the favorite of the camp was sent to Mrs. Jackson at her home near Charlotte, N. C. A few years ago, in response to an urgent request, she sent him to the Virginia Military Institute, where her husband was professor at the beginning of the war. The horse was sent to the New Orleans Exposition to be exhibited for the benefit of the Confederate Home and for the Jack-son Monumental Fund. His life was shortened by the trip and by a cold contracted while south. After his return he was consigned to the care of the inmates of the Home near Richmond; some of them having kept step with him in the trying times when their beloved leader was on his back. The horse was an object of much interest to visitors to the Soldiers' Home, and a great pet of the veterans.

Old Sorrel had passed through the "manikin method" of taxidermy, and a fair presentation of the original has been secured. His skeleton is also to be articulated. to be articulated.

As the horse had been allowed to go unshod from the time he was carried from the battlefield his hoofs had grown to an enormous length. These were trimmed to the proper size. The position given the horse is an easy one, on an inclined plane finished to represent a stone. With proper care the horse will last for many years,

THE MURDERED SOLDIER. The Identity of His Slayer Established by

COLUMBUS, Miss., May 30.—Editors Constitu-tion: In your paper of the 24th May, in your war stories, is given the account of the killing of a Mississippi soldier on the retreat of our troops from Savannah, Ga. Your correspondent does not appear to know the name of that poor boy, and as he was a member of my company will give the items he sppears to be ignorantiof. From a muster roll now before me, headed Captain Battle Fort's company of R. O. Lewis's regiment Mississippi cay-airy, dated from October 31, 1864 to December 34, 1864. I read this entry:

B. F. Hartsfield killed by inspector general of General J. R. Jackson's staff without cause.

And that officers name was Captain Tallaferro.

General J. R. Jackson's staff without cause.

And that officers name was Captain Taliaferro. His initials I do not know.

The father and family of the poor soldier thus cruelly shot down did know of his death coming in this way, and his father wrote a sad and bitter letter, saying that he sent his two boys to serve their country and could bear their death if killed in battle fighting for their country. He asked that his officers and comrades see that his murderer was punished. It happened that at the time of this occurrence not a commissioned officer of Company H was with them, as their captain was at home wounded badly and the other officers detailed for various duties. Had it been otherwise the man who shot down this poor boy would not likely have escaped instant deatb.

Very few soldiers care to know certainly that they killed even an enemy, and surely if this man yet lives he must feel that he bears the mark of Cain for thus brutally shooting down a soldier of the same cause. I know of but one other such case, and that was a captain who killed a soldier of his command early in the war, and that captain was hung as a spy in Tennessee by the federal officers.

My regiment was commanded at the time by H. L. Muldow, now assistant secretary of interior at Washington, D. C., and as to this killing I got the facts from the second sergeant of my company, who was with his company at the time.

Mr. H. S Merritt, of Atlanta, knows me full well, as he was long a resident of this place. Yours truly, Orderly Sergeant, Co. "H," Perrin's Regt.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

Stocks as Reported at the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The stock market today was more quiet, and with very little feature of im portance in the general list. Half a dozen stock monopolized the majority of dealings, and in the remainder fluctuations were slight and without special importance. Sentiment was moderately bullish, however, throughout the day, although the improvement in prices made was accomplished before noon. Reading was again a special feature of the market, being very active and strong. There was considerable excitement in stock, there being a rush to buy at the opening, and the price of stock, assessment paid, was rapidly marked up, and most assessment paid, was rapidly marked up, and most of the advantage was retained to the close. Jersey Central was also a prime favorite upon renewed buying, but other coalers barely held their own. Grangers were moderately active and firm on buying orders from Chicago, but trunk lines were dull and featureless. Fort Worth and Denver was again COMEDICARDLY WERE Although, one or two of the and featureless. Fort Worth and Denver was again conspicuously weak, although one or two of the specialties were decidedly weak. The opening was about steady, changes from last evening's prices being for slight fractions only, very evenly divided between gains and losses. Prices were strong from the opening, and natural advances were made over the entire list. Toward noon the market became dull and prices began to sag. There was absolutely no feature until the last hour, when there was a renewal of the firm tone, accompanied by a little more animation, and the close when there was a renewal of the firm tone, accompanied by a little more animation, and the close was steady to firm, and about the best prices reached. The total sales was 216,000 shares. The final changes for the day are very irregular, but generally for insignificant fractions only.

MANCHESTER, June 1.-The Guardian, in its commercial article today, says: Owing to holidays but little business has been done, and last weeks' inactivity still prevails. Croth sections report miscellaurous business, There have been some offering for small quantities of India staples mostly below the lowest prices touched and sellers gener-ally refused to entertain them. Yarn is in poor de-mand. Spinners are offering their production freely at previous rates. THE CHICAGO MARKET, Features of the Speculative Movement is Grain and Produce, Special to The Constitution.

CHICAGO, June 1—Deliveries of wheat on the board at the monthly delivery this morning were very light, but all that went round finally got locged with the clique. Most of the deliveries were made at offices, as none of those who were short cared to have it known. It was stated on. short cared to have it known. It was stated or good authority that the clique did not get within a large amount of wheat due them. The amount of wheat delivered today is generally estimated at about 3,000,000 burhels, besides advance deliveries made yesterday afternoon. This puts about all of the cash wheat in the hands of the clique, as was expected. When trading opened the crowd in the wheat pit was very nervous. June opened at 80% and fluctuated wildly at the fear of shorts and the and fluctuated wildly at the fear of shorts and the whim of the clique. After the first excitement of the opening June quieted down considerably. It gotup to 91%c, and was taken in hand by the clique, who put enough property on the market to send it back to 88%c. After the clique let go of it again it went up at a bound to 88c, and stayed there very steady for the balance of the morning session. July opened strong at 89%c, and, in sympathy with June, gotup -0 88%@87c in the first flurry, but flually became more quiet and sold down to 88%c. Around scame more quiet and sold down to 86%. Around 86% it held steady for a long time, and closed for the day at that figure. June closed on the afterboard at 89%.

Cold, damp weather was much a bull factor in cont today as the dry weather was much a buil factor in corn today as the dry weather of a week ago was. July opened strong at 39½c, sold to 39½c and was very active, holding uniformly steady around 39½c, and closed for the day at 89½c.

Provisions also opened strong. July ribs started at 7.12½ and sold to 7.30 in the first fifteen minutes.

Ribs were more active than for some time, and July sold up to 7.20 in the course of the forenoon and remained at that figure until the close.

REVENUE MATTERS. Exciting Experiences of Two Officers-A

Deputies Finley and Stephens went up to Tickenetly, Gilmer county, after Will Elmonson, who is charged with conspiracy. Proceeding to the vicinity of Edmunson's house, the officers concealed themselves not far away but in such positions that they could com-mand the approaches to the house. According to the statements of the officers, these precau-tions were taken because of Edmunson's repu-

After waiting some time, Finley caught sight of Edmonson. The latter started on a dead run across country, but after a chase of a quarter of a mile was overtaken by the officer, who succeeded, after a good deal of a struggle, in throwing his man to the ground. Pathetic Appeal of an Ex-Confederate—A Card from Captain Harrison.
Some time sgo, many papers throughout the state gave space to an item concerning a contribu ion box which Captain Harrison, of the executive department, was supposed to keep upon his deak, the object being to raise funds for needy ex-confederate soldiers. The result has been that Captain Harrison has received a number of communications concerning the matter. One of these, received yesterday, is the subject of the following card:
Editors Constitution—The newspapers of the state have generally circulated a report that the writer kept upon his deak, in the executive depertment, a contribution box which is called "Old Confed," that many contributions find their way into the box, and were distributed to needy exconfederate soldiers. One of the results of this notice is a pathetic appeal from a poor, needy exconfederate, who writes me as follows:
"I am a very poor one-legged confederate in deep distress. I was the color bearer of the Sixteenth North Carolina regiment, Pender's brigade, A. P. Hill's corps. I am here in a strange country.
There are eleven of us in our family, and ten of them are down sick with measles, and they are very sick. I have not a cent in the world. I was studying what to do, and found the encloved notice in a paper, and I thought would try and see if you would not help me a little in my greet need. I never asked a man to help me before in my life. I will ever remember you if you feel disposed to assist me in my hour of trouble."

A small sum would do him great good, and would carry joy to a distressed household.
Contributions left either with the undersigned, or at the office of The Constitution, or with W. A. Wright, compitoller-general, will be acknowledged and promptly forwarded. Respectfully.

George Oakes is languishing behind the bars at the police station.

Oakes, it will be remembered, is the man who was reported to have been killed at Chattanooga a few days ago. He is a mighy lively corpse. For some days the police have been keeping a lookout for George, but until last evening he succeeded in evading arrest. Yesterday morning he grew tired of the hide and seek business, and going out to Horton's court, he telephoned to the police station and said he would give himself up if there was no case booked against him. The station house keeper answered that it was his duty to give himself up, whether there was a case against him or not, but George couldn't see it in that light.

Detectives Reeves and Bedford started after him, one going by the way of the railroad while the other went up Alabama street. Oakes stood on Forsyth street between Alabama and the railroad crossing, perfectly oblivious of the fate in store for him. So intent was he upon gazing at the Salvation Army building that the detectives had almost reached him before he saw either of them. Seeing that he was caught, Oakes walked up to Bedford with the remark, "Well, you've got me."

"Yes."

He was taken there and locked up. This morning he will be arraigned in the city court to answer to a charge of contempt in failing to answer to a summons of the court to appear as a witness in the liquor cases concerning which he is supposed to know much. He says he will tell all when the time comes.

BOUND WITH SILKEN CORDS. A Remantic Marriage Early Yesterday Morning.

groom being Mr. Hubert Culberson, one of the younger members of the Atlanta bar.

The cathedral was appropriately dressed with flowers and evergreens. As the early morning sunbeams stole through the windows and filled the chancel with their light, the brows of the bride and groom borrowed their soft radiance and beamed with that jey which they could not repress. The scene was a romantic and beautiful one. The church contained a large number of the friends of the contracting parties.

The organist played Mendelssohn's wedding march as the party entered the church and walked up the aisle. The bride leaned upon her father's arm, and the attendants followed in this order:

Judge Blackley gave the bride away.

When the rites were finished the couple received the warm congratulations of their friends. The wedding party immediately entered carriages and were driven to the Union depot. Mr. and Mrs. Culberson took the Air Line train for Clarksville, being accompanied by Chief Justice Bleckley. They will spend a short honeymoon at the judge's country home, then they will return to Atlanta, making their permanent home at West End.

The bride is one of the most estimable young ladies that Atlanta has ever produced. She possesses a cultivated mind, and is amiable and generous. Her friends are numerous.

We were shown yesterday by William Hawn, of Knoxville, Tenn, the inventor, an improved m dibag, which appears to be decidedly the simplest, best and most durable new device for improvement in mail pouches that has been patented. The peculiarity of the invention consists in the opening and of the bag being made rigid by reinforcements of leather, so that the mouth of the bag when open forms a parallelogram of the largest size that could be made of the same extent of leather. In addition to this special advantage, there is also a simple and novel device for locking the bag, which is also covered by letters patent. The invention is altogether unique, and we believe its merits are so apparent that in due time the government will adopt it.

Mr. Hawn visits Atlanta with the view of sulisting some of our citizens in behalf of his invention, and he will be glad to confer with such gentlemen as may feel an interest in the matter at the Constitution office at ten o'clock this morning.

The offensive taste of the Oil has long acted as a great objection to its use; but in this form the trouble is obviated. A host of certificates might be given here to testify to the excellence and success of "Wilbor's Cod-Liver Oil and Lime;" but the fact that it is regularly prescribed by the medical faculty is sufficient. Mr. Frank Myers came near losing his life while trying to rescue his pet dog from a par-ilous position. He and his wife and several friends went out Pryor street day before yes-terday to look at his new and handsome resi-

After examining the building the party want out into the yard to look at the well that had just been dug. Mr. Myers owns a very pretty deg which he values highly.

reached the curb. The dog was fast losing his

ALBANY, April 16, 1884. Some years ago I was thrown from a wagon and fractured two of my ribs. I was so badly hurt that I had to sit up in a chair for four days and nights. The fourth day my mother olaced two Allcock's Porous Plasters over my broken ribs. The next day my sufferings diminished, and I was able to lie down. I continued to improve every day. Two weeks after the accident I got up and attended to business. I renewed the plasters twice, and found myself almost entirely well in a month,
